WELCOME TO WKND

MATT JUUL, BOSTON FEATURES EDITOR

Winter isn't exactly swimwear season, but that won't stop these Bostonians from baring it all at Saturday's Santa Speedo Run. The annual fundraiser has become quite the tradition in the Hub, as hundreds of locals strip down each year for a chilly run around Back Bay, followed by a few drinks at a couple of area bars. If that doesn't sound like your idea of fun, don't fret, because there are plenty of things happening around town this weekend.

JINGLE BALL ROCK

The annual Jingle Ball tour rolls back into the TD Garden on Sunday night. We caught up with Why Don't We, your new favorite boy band, ahead of their performance at this year's show.

Everything you need to know about the Santa Speedo Run 2017

The annual fundraiser returns to Boston this weekend

CHARLIE WOLFSON

Temperatures are dropping, and the holiday season is picking up steam, which means it's time for the Santa Speedo Run 2017.

The event has become somewhat of an institution since its humble beginning in 2000. What started as a dare has turned into an annual spectacle, with hundreds of men and women running down Boylston Street wearing nothing but tight-fitting bathing suits.

Since 2012, the event has doubled as a fundraiser for the Play Ball Foundation, a nonprofit that aims to expand and create athletic opportunities for urban middle-schoolers in need.

"The whole purpose of the foundation is to give kids in the city access to those things that many of us grew up with and take for granted," says Play Ball leader Jennifer Harney.

Here's everything you need to know about Saturday's Santa Speedo Run.

Run time and location

Before the run kicks off at 1 p.m., head to Lir Tavern for registration and a pre-run party, which begins at 10 a.m. For those simply hoping to spectate, the run consists of a loop down Boylston Street to Berkeley Street, returning through Newbury Street and Gloucester Street.

Required attire

The requirements for running aren't too complicated. Participants need to be over the age of 21, and wearing some kind of tight-fitting bathing suit. Any additional clothing or accessories are at the runner's discretion, but those basic requirements are firm. A light heart and a sense of humor is highly recommended, as a day of drinking, festivity and running semi-naked through the streets of Boston is best enjoyed with a sense of humor.

Party times

If you're running, you owe it to yourself to enjoy the pre-run party. Head to Lir Tavern at the corner of Boylston Street and Gloucester Street, starting at 10 a.m. to celebrate before the action starts with your fellow daring runners. Organizers recommend wearing your suit underneath your street clothes to make transitioning to run-time as seamless as possible. There's also post-run party scheduled at 1:30 p.m. that will be held back at Lir Tavern.

Meet Why Don't We, your new favorite boy band

The teen heartthrobs are hitting the road for Jingle Ball 2017. MATT JUUL

Why Don't We performs at Jingle Ball in Boston on Sunday night.
ATLANTIC RECORDS

Move over One Direction, there's a new boy band in town.

Jonah Marais, Corbyn Besson, Daniel Seavey, Jack Avery and Zach Herron of the group Why Don't We have quickly become bona fide pop stars and may be the hardest-working teens in music. In their first year as a band, Why Don't We has pumped out four EPs—as well as a Christmas record—and has amassed more than 100 million views on YouTube. Now they're hitting the road alongside Taylor Swift, Demi Lovato and others for Jingle Ball 2017.

Performing on the tour is a big deal for Marais, as the Minnesota native has attended the concert every year with his sister since 2009. The 19-year-old singer admits that it's surreal to share the stage with some of his favorite musical acts.

"I've imagined myself up on the stage a lot of times," Marais tells Metro. "Now that we're here, we're on this tour, it's a pretty crazy feeling."

While Why Don't We is the latest group to take up the boy band mantle, their sound is a bit more diverse than past pop crooners like New Kids on the Block or the Backstreet Boys.

Drawing influences from sources such as Ed Sheeran, Drake and even the Beatles, Why Don't We likes to dabble in a variety of styles. According to Seavey, their recently released holiday EP, "A Why Don't We Christmas," epitomizes their eclectic tastes, featuring everything from doo-wop to a capella.

"We're just making the music we love and doing it our way," Seavey says. "We're just doing it the Why Don't We way."

Along with musical styles, the band has taken a few other lessons from their favorite performers.

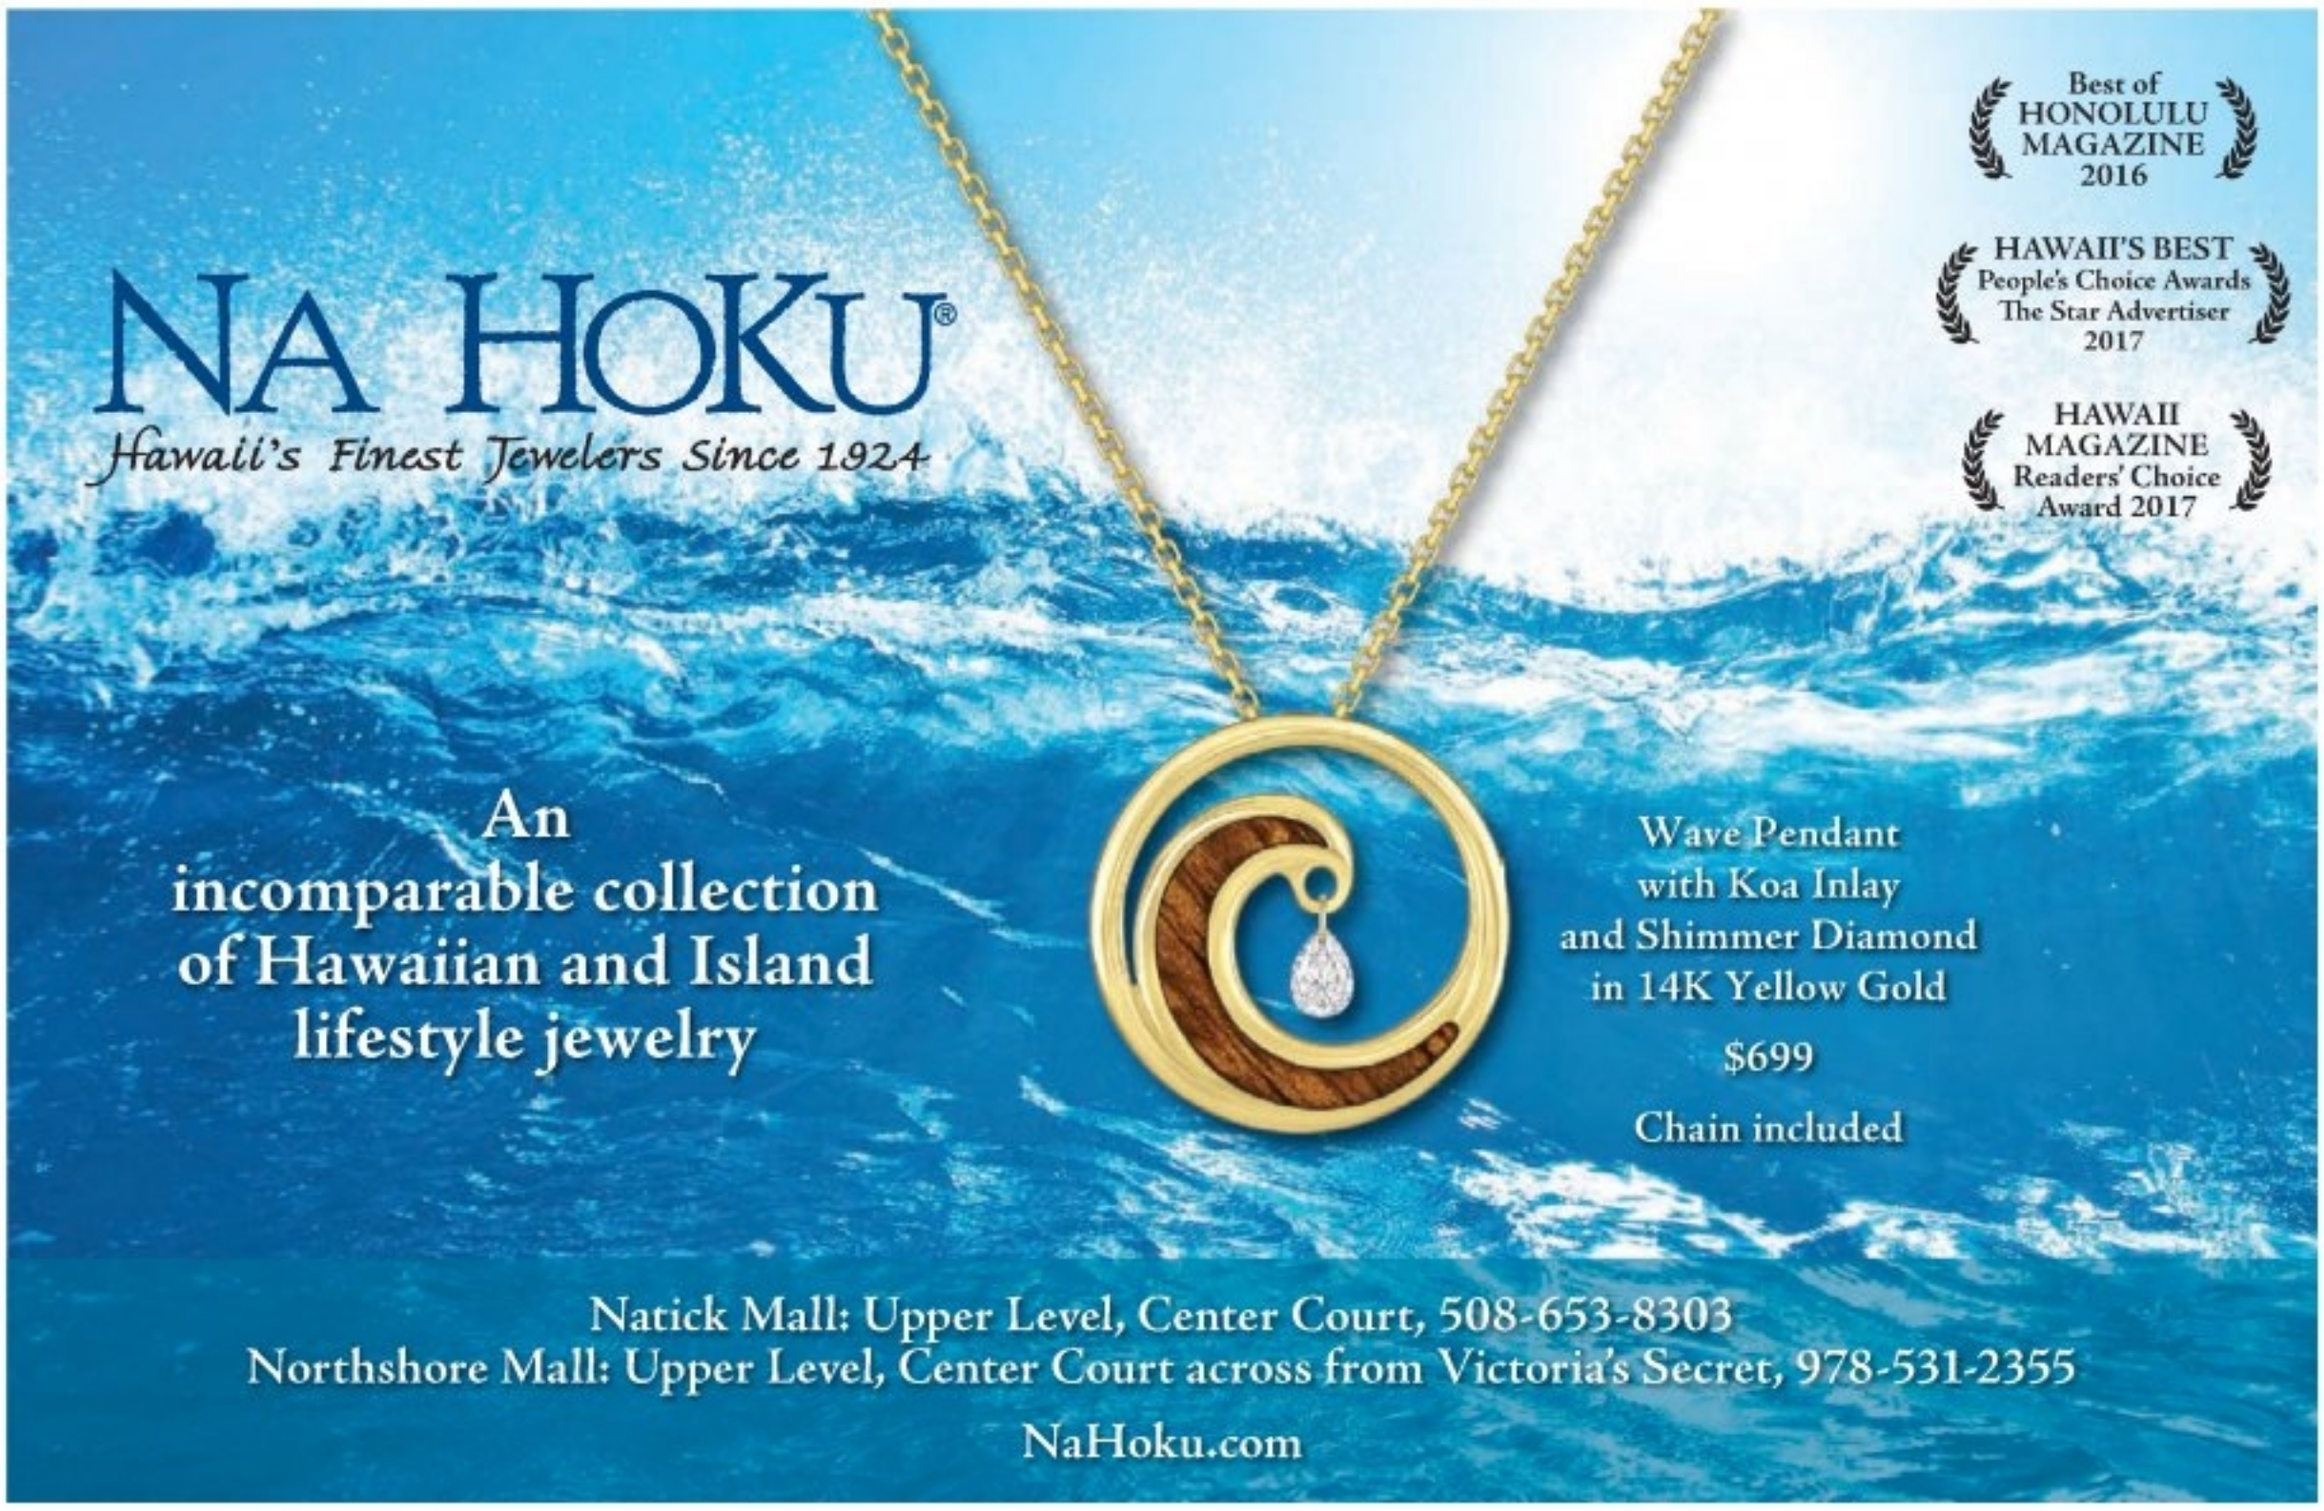
If you're wondering how a group of teens has found the movitation to create and release so much music in only a year, Seavey credits Drake for inspiring Why Don't We's work ethic.

"Drake is a big one for us," he says. "How much music he releases, we've tried to do that releasing four EPs in the first year of being a band. We've kind of taken on that challenge of putting out as much music as we can."

Above all, the band wants to follow in the Beatles' footsteps by remaining true to their sound, never being afraid to showcase their personalities on or off the stage.

"We take big influence from the Beatles, just looking at how they live their lives and how close they were together even as people," Besson says. "They weren't afraid to show their personalities, so we definitely take influence from that."

"We don't have someone telling us what kind of songs to put out or what kind of vibe we have to go for," adds Marais. "We want to put out the music that we want to drop. It's 100 percent us. Our sound keeps evolving."



Ski deals around New England you have to check out this winter

Save a few bucks before hitting the slopes.

ERIC WILBUR

Whether you're looking to take advantage of the snow that might be headed our way this weekend or just seeking out an enticing sticking stuffer for the skier or rider in your family, there are plenty of early-season deals check out as the holidays approach.

Here are a few ski deals you should look into this winter.

Wachusett Mountain
Through Dec. 18, Wachusett Mountain is offering a sale on its three-day lift cards, $135.15 adults, $118.15 juniors (normally $159 and $139, respectively). There's also a $30 savings on three-day learn-to-ski packages at $169.15 (ages six and up). New this season for pass holders at Wachusett is the ability to ski Stratton Mountain Resort in Vermont with 50 percent savings on lift tickets midweek, 25 on weekends and holidays. wachusett.com

Nashoba Valley
Nashoba Valley has yet to announce its opening date for the 2017-18 season, but for every $50 you currently purchase in gift cards to the Westford ski area, you'll receive an additional $10 tacked on. Thus, a $50 gift card becomes a $60 gift card, a $100 gift card a $120 gift card, etc. skinashoba.com

Mount Snow
Mount Snow Resort will celebrate its annual Founders Day on Dec. 12 with lift tickets going for only $12. There will even be free cake to celebrate the resort's birthday at 3 p.m. to boot. Buy tickets online now before they disappear. mountsnow.com/events/calendar/founders-day

Black Mountain and Cranmore Mountain
Similar to what visitors can experience at nearby Story Land during the summer months in New Hampshire, Jackson's Black Mountain and North Conway's Cranmore Mountain Resort both offer perks for latecomers upon arrival. Ski free after 2 p.m on days when you purchase a lift ticket for the following day. Think of it as a good way to beat an anticipated powder day, with a little extra to enjoy. Offer valid seven days a week. blackmt.com, cranmore.com

Cannon Mountain
New Hampshire's Cannon Mountain will, once again, offer 2-for-1 skiing prices on Tuesdays and Thursdays this winter (two for $77 or one for $52). Purchase a 10-pack of anytime lift tickets for $669, more than $100 off the normal cost. cannonmt.com

King Pine
Ski Tuesday nights at King Pine in Madison, New Hampshire, for only $10 (4-9 p.m.), along with $10 tubing and a $10 burger and beer deal with a valid lift ticket. kingpine.com

Sunday River Mountain
Time is ticking on this one, so skiing enthusiasts need to hurry if they want to score this deal. Sunday River Mountain Resort has its Kickstarter Pass available for $159 ($129 ages 13-18, $99 ages 6-12). Only available through Dec. 10, it's valid at the lifts every day until Dec. 24. sundayriver.com

Matt Bellassai brings

See the social-media star complain IRL. MATT JUUL

Matt Bellassai whines in person at the Wilbur Theatre this weekend.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

A lot of people whine on the internet, but not most have been able to turn their constant complaining into a career like Matt Bellassai.

The comedian rose to social-media stardom with his hit online series "Whine About It" for BuzzFeed. Taking issue with everything from bad roommates to the worst parts of fall, Bellassai drew in millions of views each week with his wine-fueled rants and raves.

After winning a People's Choice Award for Favorite Social Media Star in 2016, Bellassai eventually parted ways with BuzzFeed to pursue a number of solo projects, including writing his book "Everything Is Awful: And Other Observations," which was released earlier this year. Bellassai has been touring the country to promote the book, as well as show off his standup skills.

Bellassai, who performs at the Wilbur Theatre on Sunday, tells Metro that fans can expect to see him take his over-the-top personality to another level when his live show stops in Boston.

"It's a more extreme version of what you get of me on the internet," Bellassai says. "But it's a pretty traditional stand-up set. It's me telling jokes for a little over an hour or so."

As someone who's best known for his work online, Bellassai is excited by the challenge of translating his comedy to a more "traditional" medium. The online star hopes his material stacks up to other comics in the minds of audiences.

So far on the tour, Bellassai has been thankful to just make it out of each city unscathed.

"I've survived," jokes Bellassai. "Every city I make it out alive. That is my measure of success."

While the award-winning social-media star isn't afraid to whine about the worst types of people at Starbucks or the habits of annoying couples, don't expect him to say anything bad about the Hub when he ships up to Boston.

"Honestly, Boston was the one city I was a little scared of," Bellassai says. "I've just heard horror stories of comedians who bomb and then someone, like, beats them up after. That's definitely going to happen to me."

FAMILY FUN

Santa in the Seaport

Santa knows where it's classy, so it's hardly a shock that he'll be in the Seaport District Saturday to meet with his "clients," i.e. your kids. Kids can also color on the walls, decorate cookies, get some hot cocoa and the nearby café Brew and restaurant Gather will be open, offering stronger stuff for parents—because you've been good too this year.
Dec. 9, 11 a.m.- 3 p.m., District Hall, 75 Northern Ave., Boston, free, dhsantabrunch.eventbrite.com

'A Charlie Brown Christmas'

It's hard to believe "A Charlie Brown Christmas" first aired 52 years ago. Aside from a couple outdated references (bubblegum cards?), it just feels timeless. If you've passed it on to your kids, you all might enjoy this live theatrical version from Boston Children's Theatre. Note: they're also performing it at the Boston Center for the Arts—see the website for details.
Dec. 7-24, Regent Theatre, 7 Medford St., Arlington, $15-$25, bostonchildrenstheatre.org

MUSIC

RICHARD KNOWLES

Boston Music Awards

Each year, the Boston Music Awards determine which Boston band is finally ready to move to New York. Sike! Actually, NYC can save its $1,000/month closets for someone else, because these artists are doing just fine here. The 10 slated to perform live also attest to the vibrancy of the present scene, especially its hip-hop acts, in a town better known for its indie rock products.
Dec. 7, 6:30 p.m., House of Blues, 15 Lansdowne St., Boston, $30-$40, bostonmusicawards.com

BURLESQUE

'The Slutcracker'

It seems fitting that Boston, home to one of country's most prestigious and reverent annual productions of "The Nutcracker" should also have given birth to the very naughty, demon-child reimagining, "The Slutcracker." If your idea of holiday cheer involves leather and whips, pole-dancing, pasties and a character called the Dildo Prince, this is right up your alley (wink). Rejoice!
Through Dec. 31, Somerville Theatre, 55 Davis Sq., Somerville, $30, 18+, theslutcracker.com

MOVIES

Harry Dean Stanton: Say Something True

The recently deceased actor Harry Dean Stanton showed up in the funniest places. Just take a look at the hodgepodge that is this series of films, including "Escape from New York," "Pretty in Pink," "Christine," "Cockfighter," "Alien," "Wise Blood," and Stanton's most iconic role, "Paris, TX."
Through Dec. 31, Museum of Fine Arts, 465 Huntington Ave., Boston, $11, mfa.org

'Jack Frost'

The Brattle screens this 1997 comic horror film about a serial killer who comes back from the dead as a snowman—not to be confused with the 1998 family comedy of the same name. The screening includes a talk from publisher Kier-la Janisse whose press Spectacular Optical recently released a book on the Christmas Horror genre titled "Yuletide Terror."
Dec. 9, 9:30 p.m., Brattle Theatre, 40 Brattle St., Cambridge, $12, brattlefilm.org

BOOKS

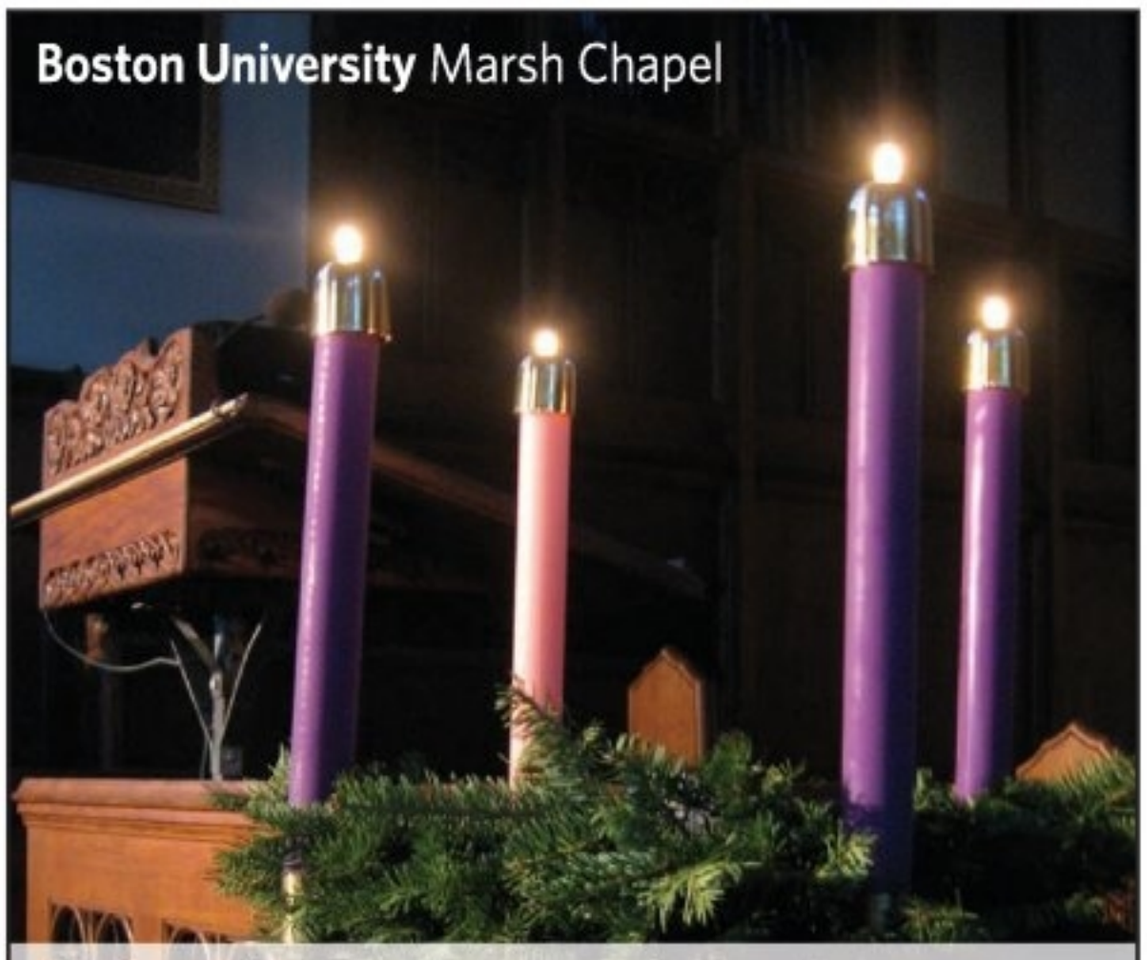
Kevin Young

With his latest book, "Bunk," poet and critic Kevin Young traces the history of the American hoax, from the phony mermaids of the 19th century to the fake news of today. Our lies, Young argues, reveal truths about our cultural aspirations, fears and obsessions, from the fake "savages" of P.T. Barnum to the bizarre blackface of Rachel Dolezal.
Dec. 7, 7 p.m., Harvard Book Store, 1256 Mass. Ave., Cambridge, free, harvard.com

MUSIC

Morrissey

Morrissey's gotten flack for controversial comments recently, but his fans are used to Moz's big mouth: sometimes it says ridiculous, arrogant things, but more often it says very clever, heartfelt things. For better or worse, the former Smiths frontman remains one of a kind, with a trademark mix of cynicism and romanticism that's proved both inimitable and endlessly influential.
Dec. 7, 8:30 p.m., Orpheum Theatre, 1 Hamilton Pl., Boston, $225-$235, ticketmaster.com



COMEDY

Michelle Wolf

You may not know Michelle Wolf's name, but you've probably laughed at jokes she's written for "The Daily Show" and "Late Night with Seth Meyers." She's also got her own Comedy Central TV series in the works, following up on her pair of digital series for the network, "Now Hiring" and "Used People."

Dec. 8-9, Laugh Boston, 425 Summer St., Boston, $29, laughboston.com

SHOPPING

Harvard Square Holiday Fair

Like the other holiday markets we've been featuring in these pages lately, the one in Harvard Square is a chance to buy unique hand-made gifts straight from the hands that made them. It's one of the oldest of its kind in town, dating back to 1986, when the Square was a more hippy-ish place, as attested by the Fair's motto: "Peace, Love, and Holiday Shopping."

Dec. 9-23, 50 Church St., 4th Floor, Cambridge, free,harvardsquareholidayfair.com

FESTIVALS

Holiday on Ice

Community Ice Skating at Kendall Square offers free skating all day for their annual Holiday on Ice—heads up though, you'll still have to pay to rent skates if you need to. At 2 p.m. you can take in a show from professional figure skaters, some of them international contenders. It's a great chance to take in an art form that, unless the Winter Olympics are on, tends to be ignored.

Dec. 9, 11 a.m.-9 p.m., Community Ice Skating, 300 Athenaeum St., Cambridge, free, paddleboston.com/skating

GOING OUT

Flamenco at Aeronaut Brewing Company

Flamenco Boston provides classical Spanish entertainment at Aeronaut Brewing this Friday night, allowing you to fantasize that you're in some raucous Andalusian café sometime in the 1800s, without having to actually travel through time or space, or defend to the death your honor against some mustachioed scoundrel's accusations — hold up, we just got an idea for the next big "prestige television" series.

Shopping for gifts has to be one of the most stressful parts of the holidays. What are you ever supposed to get your dad? How do you balance making the holidays memorable for your kid and not spoiling her? What's a suitable gift for the boyfriend you're planning to break up with in the new year?

What if, this year, you quit focusing your efforts on shopping for friends, fam, frenemies, etc., and instead buy for people who know what they want and will actually appreciate it?

With USPS Operation Santa, you can "adopt" a letter to Santa and answer a wish list for a family or kid in need. It's straight-forward, you don't have to think about what to get and as Santa's anonymous helper, you're taking yourself out of the equation. (Just don't blow the cover like Liz Lemon in that "30 Rock" ep.)

Here's how it works: Visit delivercheer.com, where you can peruse handwritten letters to Santa from kids and families. Select the letter that you want to adopt and USPS will email it to you along with a letter ID. You can decide to purchase some or all of the gifts on the wish list, or simply write a response — signed "Santa," or course. You can adopt the letters as an individual or act as an official Santa ambassador and organize group adoptions — say, as a team of friends or colleagues.

When you're ready, bring your stamped and addressed letter and/or package of gifts, labeled with your letter ID on the top left, along with a completed adopter form, photo ID and address to your local participating post office. In Boston, that's the U.S. Post Office at 25 Dorchester Ave.

If you or someone you know wants to write a letter to Santa, that's an option, too. The USPS estimates that it receives a million every year. Just write your letter and address it to Santa Claus or USPS Operation Santa, along with the city, state and ZIP code of your participating post office and mail it off.

You can also donate to Metro's annual holiday toy drive — visit Metro.us for more information.

KATE MOONEY

Jump rope

It's the perfect stocking stuffer and it costs less than a bespoke cocktail. Ten minutes of skips burns 125 calories on average, which is roughly equivalent to running an eight-minute mile, except this is low-impact. And you can do it anywhere! (Except maybe not in your apartment if you have neighbors below you.) $10, Amazon.com.

Kombucha home brew kit

For your friend who has been talking about brewing her own kombucha and getting her gut right but never makes it happen, this affordable kit is basically kombucha for dummies. It has everything a first-time brewer would need, including a SCOBY culture and liquid starter, a glass brew jar and most important, instructions! Kombuchabrooklyn.com, $35.

Foam roller

Nobody wants to use a foam roller. But once you develop the habit, you get hooked on its hurts-so-good release — and your sore, knotted muscles will thank you later. Pick up one of these for the workout fanatic in your life. $9.99, Amazon.com.

Bluetooth clip-on speaker

Pimp your pal's bike ride with this sea-green Bluetooth speaker she can clip right on her clothes to serenade her as she cruises the neighborhood. Unlike headphones, this speaker will pump the tunes without completely drowning out the noise of traffic, making it a safer bet. Hollar.com, $8.50

S'well water bottle

Friends don't let friends stay dehydrated. So you can't always get your pals laid but you can help them quench their literal thirst. A 17 oz. S'well bottle is sleek and stylin', made of temperature-controlled stainless steel and it's good for the environment. swellbottle.com, $25.

Verilux light-therapy lamp

If your friend loathes the winter and suspects she might have seasonal affective disorder, treat him to this Verilux light-therapy lamp. It emits 5,000 lux, which is considered medium intensity and it has a recommended use of 45-60 minutes a day. Best of all, it's portable and only 1.5 pounds, so she can slip it in her purse and whip it out anywhere — say, at her desk at work when she's feeling blue. $32, amazon.com

Subscription to Headspace app

For your friend who needs to get into a better, well, headspace, this popular mindfulness meditation app features daily 10-minute exercises guided by founder Andy Puddicombe (in his soothing British voice). New users start with 10 free sessions, but continuing requires a monthly subscription. $7.99/month, headspace.com

Two-thirds of young Americans are fearful about country's future: Poll

A Harvard survey from the university's Institute of Politics also found that President Trump's approval rating is dropping among young adults. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Are you concerned about the future of our country? If so, you're not alone.

More than two-thirds of young adults in the United States say they are more fearful than they are hopeful about America's future, according to a poll from Harvard University.

This week, the Harvard Kennedy School's Institute of Politics (IOP) released its fall 2017 youth poll, a national survey of America's 18- to 29-year-olds.

The poll is part of the Harvard Public Opinion Project, which has polled young Americans twice a year since 2000 in order to understand their public opinions, voting trends and views on public service.

Not only are young adults fearful about the country's future, they actively think the U.S. is on the wrong track. More than 50 percent of those polled said the country is headed in the wrong direction, compared with 14 percent of young Americans who say it's on the right path.

Making a turn to the right track might mean changing congressional leadership. Less than a year before the 2018 midterm elections, 65 percent of young Americans said they would prefer to see Democratic control of Congress, versus 33 percent who prefer Republicans to be in charge.

President Donald Trump's approval rating among young Americans is dropping, according to a Harvard poll. GETTY IMAGES

"American political institutions are at a tipping point," said John Della Volpe, IOP polling director, in a statement. "Millennials are now the largest generation in the electorate. This poll and the Virginia election show that they are becoming more motivated — and I believe the fear that exists today about our future will soon be turned into the fuel that will reform our government. The only question is whether this comes from inside or outside the traditional party structure."

The poll also found that President Donald Trump's approval rating has taken a dive: Trump's job approval rating sits at 25 percent, a seven-point decrease since Harvard's Spring poll.

That disapproval isn't limited to Democrats, either. Among young Republicans specifically, two-thirds approve of Trump's presidential performance, which is a 12-point drop since the spring.

WHEN ASKED WHAT THEY SEE AS THREATS FACING AMERICA, 67 PERCENT OF YOUNG ADULTS SAID THE GREATEST THREATS COME FROM INSIDE OUR COUNTRY RATHER THAN INTERNATIONAL FORCES.

Young adults also weighed in on what they see as threats facing America, but according to 67 percent of them, the greatest threats come from inside our country, rather than from international forces.

When asked about the biggest threats, the top answers included President Trump, "ourselves" and racism.

These factors keep millions of women from obtaining a bachelor's degree

A bachelor's degree can give many workers an edge when it comes to job hunting and their salary, so why don't millions of women — 76 million to be exact — have one?

Because of numerous life factors, a new study from The American Women's College at Bay Path University in Longmeadow, Massachusetts, found. The study, which was conducted by Research Now, surveyed 2,000 women between the ages of 25 and 44.

While more than half of respondents said they attempted but never finished a degree, a staggering 82 percent said they didn't complete their education because they put other priorities such as family, work and finances first. Fifty-seven percent said financial obstacles halted their studies, while 54 percent cited family commitments.

Additionally, a majority of the women surveyed said their schools did not offer the type of flexibility they needed to continue their studies, which included available online learning, supportive faculty and access to financial assistance.

Though 66 percent said they were disappointed that they didn't obtain their degree, most relayed that they are determined to finish their studies — and 94 percent said they'd feel better about themselves if they received their bachelor's degree.

Ninety-six percent of women surveyed said that going back to school would give them employment opportunities, but 69 percent said they were nervous about returning to school. Fifty-eight percent found the thought overwhelming, but 70 percent said they think going back to school would show their children how important education is.

"Adult women students are not the only ones to gain from a college degree," Dr. Carol A. Leary, president of Bay Path University, said in a statement. "Generations for decades to come will benefit. Educate the woman, and you educate her children."

‘Living tattoos’ can light up in response to certain chemicals

Researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have developed 3-D printable “living” tattoos. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

You’ve heard of white-ink tattoos and UV ink tattoos, but now, there’s an innovation in the works when it comes to body art.

Researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have developed “living ink” tattoos, which contain genetically programmable living cells.

When those living cells are exposed to different chemicals or molecular compounds, they react, causing parts of the tattoo to light up.

“A variety of different switches and buttons control the information flow in electronic devices. Genes of a living organism are controlled in a similar way — a specific chemical stimulus turns ‘on’ the production of proteins,” an MIT video explains. “In contrast to electronics, living beings can easily respond to chemical stimuli.”

Bacteria cells make up the tattoo, which the researchers were able to 3-D print into the shape of a tree.

Each branch of that tree is sensitive to a different reactor, and when the tattoo is placed on skin that has also been exposed to that same reactor (like a certain chemical), the corresponding branch alights.

In the future, according to the university, “researchers may use the team’s technique to print ‘living computers’ — structures with multiple types of cells that communicate with each other, passing signals back and forth, much like transistors on a microchip.”

So what benefit can these living computers bring about when on our skin as tattoos? They fit into the same technological trend, researchers say, as wearable sensors and interactive displays.

The technique of 3-D printing living cells is revolutionary in itself; though the idea isn’t new, other researchers haven’t been able to execute it very successfully.

“It turns out those cells were dying during the printing process,” researcher Hyunwoo Yuk said in a statement. “They are too weak and they easily rupture.”

Now that scientists have developed a way to print cells and keep them alive, they can program tattoos to be responsive to all sorts of things.

Living cells can be engineered, researchers explained, to sense environmental chemicals and pollutants and even changes in pH or temperature. That means your future tattoos may do more than show off your style — they could alert you to different environmental changes.

MIT engineers have devised a 3-D printing technique that uses a new kind of ink made from genetically programmed living cells. COURTESY OF MIT/THE RESEARCHERS

Time magazine names #MeToo 'silence breakers' as Person of the Year

The publication spotlighted the women who shared stories about sexual harassment and abuse through the #MeToo campaign. REUTERS

Time magazine has named the social movement aimed at raising awareness about sexual harassment and assault, epitomized by the #MeToo social-media hashtag, as the most influential "person" in 2017, the publication announced Wednesday.

"This is the fastest-moving social change we've seen in decades, and it began with individual acts of courage by hundreds of women — and some men, too — who came forward to tell their own stories," Time Editor-in-Chief Edward Felsenthal told NBC News, referring to them as "the silence breakers."

The recognition comes amid a wave of public allegations of sexual misconduct that have targeted some of the most prominent men in U.S. politics, media and entertainment, leading to multiple firings and investigations.

As more people made their accusations public, other individuals \ shared their own stories of assault and harassment, often with posts on social media platforms using the hashtag #MeToo.

"I could never had envisioned something that would change the world. I was trying to change my community," Tarana Burke, who created the hashtag, told NBC. "This is just the start. It's not just a moment, it's a movement. Now the work really begins."

President Donald Trump, who was Time's person of the year in 2016, was the first runner-up this year, followed by Chinese President Xi Jinping, Felsenthal said.

Other finalists included U.S. Department of Justice Special Counsel Robert Mueller, who is leading the investigation of alleged Russian meddling in the election that Trump won; North Korean President Kim Jong Un; "Wonder Woman" director Patty Jenkins; and football player-turned-activist Colin Kaepernick.

Time's annual distinction recognizes the person, group, thing or idea that it has determined had the greatest influence on events for the year.

"This is the fastest-moving social change we've seen in decades, and it began with individual acts of courage."

The department that could predict and prevent next recession has budget slashed

The agency's director, Richard Berner, announced his departure a month ago. LENYON WHITAKER

Donald Trump reportedly plans to make significant budget changes to the Office of Financial Research. GETTY IMAGES

President Trump reportedly will cut staff and make significant budget changes to the Office of Financial Research — the agency responsible for predicting when financial markets could crash or when the country is about to go into a recession.

According to The Wall Street Journal, top officials at the Treasury Department informed employees of the Office of Financial Research on Nov. 30 about the Trump administration's plan to make significant changes to OFR.

While it's not clear how the cuts are structured or how many people are being let go, Trump announced his initial plans to make significant changes to the OFR's budget in May, announcing it would reduce the office's budget by 25% and cut a third of its staff.

The office falls under the Treasury Department but is independently funded and spends about $100 million a year, according to The Wall Street Journal.

If Trump moves forward and makes significant cuts to the Office of Financial Research, one of the questions he will need to answer is if there will be enough manpower left to effectively provide adequate financial analysis and information to prepare for a financial market crash or recession.

The Office of Financial Research's Director Richard Berner was appointed as the office's director in 2013. Although his contract expires in 2019, he announced in November his plans to leave by the end of the year without much reason for his departure.

"After six years of commuting between Washington, D.C., and my home in New York, I have decided that it is time for me to go home to my wife and enjoy time with our grandchildren who have graced our family since I came to D.C.," Berner said in a statement in November.

Despite his plans to leave his position, he believes the agency will still function properly despite Trump's cuts. In the OFR's annual report, Berner says he's certain the department will maintain its "objectivity, integrity and quality."

The Office of Financial Research was established during the Obama Administration in 2010 after the country suffered from a financial crisis beginning in 2008 which sent the country into the Great Recession.

MIDDLE EAST

Arabs, Europe, UN reject Trump's recognition of Jerusalem as Israeli capital

Arabs and Muslims across the Middle East on Wednesday condemned the U.S. recognition of Jerusalem as Israel's capital as an incendiary move in a volatile region and Palestinians said Washington was ditching its leading role as a peace mediator.

The European Union and United Nations also voiced alarm at U.S. President Donald Trump's decision to move the U.S. Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem and its repercussions for any chances of reviving Israeli-Palestinian peacemaking.

Major U.S. allies came out against Trump's reversal of decades of U.S. and international policy on Jerusalem.

France rejected the "unilateral" decision while appealing for calm in the region. Britain said the move would not help peace efforts and Jerusalem should ultimately be shared by Israel and a future Palestinian state.

Israel, by contrast, applauded Trump's move. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said in a pre-recorded video message that it was "an important step toward peace" and it was "our goal from Israel's first day."

Trump reversed decades of U.S. policy in recognizing Jerusalem as Israel's capital in defiance of warnings from around the world that the gesture risks creating aggravating conflict in a chronically volatile Middle East.

The status of Jerusalem is home to sites holy to the Muslim, Jewish and Christian faiths; its eastern sector was captured by Israel in a 1967 war and is claimed by Palestinians for the capital of an independent state they seek. REUTERS

Tony's Metro Magic toy drive is in full swing

Metro makes it easy to donate with quick links to toy wish lists at Metro.us/magic. MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Metro's wish lists include toys for infants through pre-teenaged children. NIC CZARNECKI

There is still time to donate to Metro's annual toy drive by visiting metro.us/magic and ordering through our secure Target wish lists.

The annual toy drive, dubbed Tony's Metro Magic, helps underprivileged children in your community.

Gifts range from under $5 and up. Toys are delivered to our Metro offices in New York, Boston and Philadelphia through Dec. 15, then distributed to local charities that serve underprivileged children in those cities.

For those donating in New York, toys will go to the Coalition for the Homeless, then distributed to local children. Boston's Heading Home Inc. will receive the toys for that city, and Philadelphia's toys will go to the Institute for the Development of African-American Youth (IDAAY).

If you wish to donate, you can choose the toys, pay online, and your gifts, along with your name attached, will be automatically delivered. The wish lists include toys for infants through pre-teenagers.

This year marks the eighth anniversary of the toy drive, which is named after Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-serving editor in chief. Mr. Metcalf oversaw the project for more than four years before passing away in 2013.

Mr. Metcalf lit up every year as he saw the faces of children unwrap their holiday gifts, and it's our goal to keep that magic alive.

"Tony felt we should use the size and scale of Metro to help others and he used enormous dedication and force to execute the project and every year make children in need a little happier during the holiday season," said Metro Chief Executive Officer Yggers Mortensen. "I am proud to continue this project in honor of Tony and I hope all our readers, suppliers and members of the Metro team will help to make this yet another great Metro Magic year."

Metro is grateful for the toys already received at our offices. They're stacked in the newsroom, and each day the pile grows. We thank readers in advance for remembering the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have presents to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference in a child's holiday season.

This year marks the eighth anniversary of Metro's annual holiday toy drive.

See wine country by bike

Pedal your way through gorgeous scenery on one of these wine-centric cycling trips.

Fodor's Travel

Burgundy

Few know wine better than the French, and Burgundy is one of the country's leading regions for oenophiles. Partake in DuVine's four-day Sommelier on Wheels tour, led by award-winning master sommelier Carlton McCoy. Highlights include cycling the Route des Grands Crus among Burgundy's most esteemed vineyards, private tastings, and Michelin-starred cuisine, including a final dinner at 1243 Bourgogne Society, the world's most exclusive members-only wine club.

Piedmont

Italy's Piedmont region may be revered for its wine, cheese and truffles, but its striking landscapes make it a dream to discover by bicycle. Treat yourself to VBT's 10-day tour through the area's hilltop villages dotted with verdant vineyards and ancient castles. Along the winding roads, you'll learn about Italian grape production, sip on Spumante, tour a grappa distillery and join a truffle hunt.

Mendoza

Steak, tango and fútbol are three things Argentines do well, but their wine is one of the country's crown jewels. The province of Mendoza produces some of the finest varietals in South America, thanks to a combination of idyllic weather, soil composition, and extreme elevation. To experience Mendoza's most prestigious wineries, consider Say Hueque's three-day experience, where you will pedal along the foothills of the magnificent Andes Mountains and sip on signature blends such as Malbec and Cabernet.

Québec

As any Francophile knows, Québec is the Canadian cultural hub where old and new converge in effortless harmony. Join Butterfield & Robinson's private six-day itinerary that begins in cosmopolitan Montréal and culminates in charismatic Québec City. You'll cycle through woodland paths, on cobblestone streets, alongside sparkling lakes, and past local treasures such as historic chapels, ancestral manors, and enchanting antique shops.

Peloponnese

Greece's Peloponnese peninsula is lapped with azure waters and draws tourists from all corners of the globe for its storied past and lush vineyards. This all-inclusive six-day Peloponnese Trekking Bike Tour by Travelncycle is a must for history buffs and epicures alike. The diverse course is full of archaeological sites, ancient cities, seaside villages, and some of the best wineries in the Mediterranean.

Clare Valley

Pack your bags and head Down Under to explore Australia's Clare Valley at your own pace with a three-day, self-guided cycling adventure with Tour de Vines. The Riesling Rail Trail is a fan favorite, thanks to its charming cellars, rolling estates, and relatively level trails.

Khao Yai

When you think of Thailand, chances are wine tourism isn't among the first things that come to mind. However, hidden just two hours north of Bangkok, visitors will be delighted to find Asoke Valley. The little-known Khao Yai countryside is building a reputation as one of Asia's top up-and-coming wine regions. Speckled with elaborate Buddhist temples and home to a patchwork of luxuriant vineyards, the area produces a surprising selection of wines. Experience it firsthand with this two-day cycling tour, including three winery visits and unforgettable landscapes.

Peloponese TRAVELNCYCLE

Empordà

The Empordà region of Catalonia, Spain is a spectacular (albeit underthe-radar) destination for oenophiles; in fact, it's often referred to as the "undiscovered Tuscany." Here, cultural heritage combines with a rich gastronomic legacy surrounded by undisturbed nature. Ride along its myriad medieval villages, rural plains, national parks, and panoramic vistas overlooking the Mediterranean on Bacchus on Bikes' three-day itinerary. The classic Pirinexus route is comprised of peaceful back roads that venture to vineyards dating back centuries.

Casablanca Valley

Chileans have been producing wine since the 1550s, and the Casablanca Valley has quickly established a foothold as one of the top wine regions in South America, renowned for its refreshing whites and robust reds. Upscape's day-long bike trip brings thirsty cyclists to award-winning wineries such as Emiliana and Loma Larga Vineyards along the coast.

Sonoma County

Visitors flock to California's Sonoma County year-round to enjoy miles of rugged Pacific coastline, expansive redwood forests, and a premium culinary scene. With more than 425 wineries, it also provides a perfect weekend getaway for wine-lovers. Enjoy contemporary luxury with this three-night Short Escape package from Wine Country Bikes on a casual course that twists through the rolling hills of Dry Creek Valley with a diverse range of wineries.

Hey 'Trade Tuukka' people: Shut up

OPINION

Tuukka Rask has a 2.62 goals against average so far this season. GETTY IMAGES

The "Trade Tuukka" crowd needs to go away. It's a tired act.

Though, in fairness, it's the only thing making me comment on the Bruins right now. There's a lot going on in this town at the moment. The Patriots are 10-2, the Celtics are must-see TV, and things are about to heat up for the Red Sox with the Winter Meetings next week.

We expect great things from those three teams. For the Bruins, the understanding is that there have been some major injuries and there will be some more growing pains from younger players, so the expectations are being kept somewhat realistic.

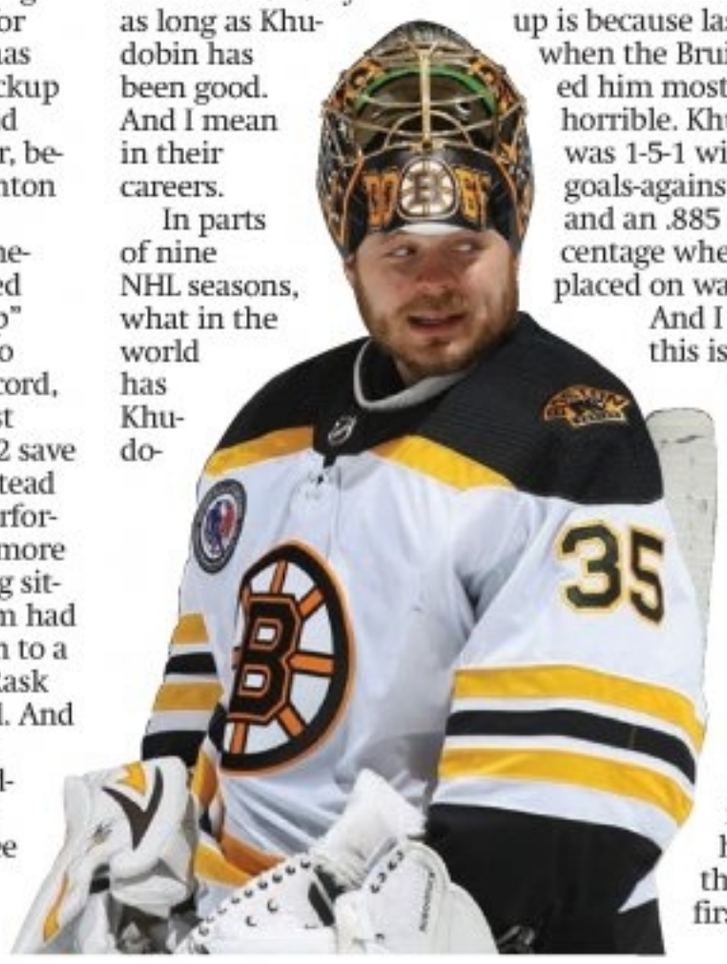
But perhaps the biggest improvement for the B's this season has come from their backup goaltender. Yes, I said "backup" goaltender, because that's what Anton Khudobin is.

Chances are, somebody will be offended by the term "backup" here. They'll point to Khudobin's 7-1-2 record, his 2.53 goals-against average, and his .922 save percentage. And instead of using his solid performance to portray a more effective goaltending situation than the team had last year, they'll turn to a struggling Tuukka Rask and call for his head. And when it's handed to them on a black-and-gold spoked platter, they'll bend the knee to Khudobin.

It's borderline insane.

Rask undoubtedly deserves criticism for his slow 5-8-2 start, which includes a 2.62 goals-against average and a .906 save percentage. To this point of the season, Khudobin has been the better goaltender. Nobody can argue that.

And Rask's $7 million cap hit also doesn't do him any favors while being outperformed by his backup. Still, Rask has been bad for only as long as Khudobin has been good. And I mean in their careers.



In parts of nine NHL seasons, what in the world has Khudobin done to convince anyone with a functioning brain that he's capable of being a No. 1 goaltender in this league? If he was up to the task, wouldn't he be somewhere else?

Everyone in the league had a chance to claim Khudobin off waivers last January and make him their top dog in net. Yet, everyone passed, and he went down to AHL-Providence.

The reason that's where Khudobin ended up is because last year, when the Bruins needed him most, he was horrible. Khudobin was 1-5-1 with a 3.06 goals-against average and an .885 save percentage when he was placed on waivers.

And I know this is a stat that I gave you several times last year while coming to Rask's defense, but it's worth repeating: Rask had 25 of the Bruins' first 26 wins in 2016-17, through the month of January. That's not because the backup goalie didn't play. He did. And he was awful.

The Bruins even rolled out multiple backup goaltenders during that stretch, but somebody not-named-Rask didn't pick up a win last season until Khudobin earned his first win on Dec. 1. And the Bruins still ended up in the playoffs.

Had the B's seen any positive production whatsoever from Khudobin in the first four months of last season, they would've probably won the Atlantic division. Instead, they finished in third place with 95 points — eight points behind the Montreal Canadiens — and had to begin the playoffs on the road, in Ottawa.

So that brings me to my ultimate reaction to Khudobin's early-season success. Which is, I couldn't be happier about it.

Rask's been too good in his career to not get back on track. He's the NHL's active career leader in both goals-against average (2.26) and save percentage (.922). And when he does find his game — if he hasn't found it already with his first shutout of the season on Saturday — the Bruins will be in great shape, with two goaltenders they can rely on, instead of just one.

So instead of running Rask out of town when the backup finally does his job, try enjoying the luxury of having two trustworthy goaltenders during the regular season.

Because it could end up being the biggest difference-maker for the Bruins come playoff time.

The best bets for NFL Week 14

Ride with young quarterbacks this weekend.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
@MetroBOS
sports@metro.us

Jimmy Garoppolo has a sparkling 102.4 passer rating so far this season. GETTY IMAGES

The Patriots don't play again until Monday night, but there are plenty of intriguing NFL matchups to keep an eye on this weekend. Here are the best bets to win you some money.

Green Bay Packers (-3) at Cleveland Browns
Green Bay has been a good bet of late with Brett Hundley gradually adjusting to the rigors of being a starting quarterback, as they've covered in three of their last four contests. Hundley should give another good account of himself against the winless Browns this week in what may be his last start under center in 2017.

Cleveland's defense offers opponents little resistance (28th in points allowed) and is particularly susceptible to the aerial attack (17th in passing yards allowed). That should mean plenty of production from streaking wideout Davante Adams, who's averaged almost six receptions and 79 YPG in his last five games. And the Browns' home field has hardly provided an advantage of late, as they're just 4-15-1 ATS in their last 20 games in the "Dawg Pound."

The Packers' stoppers are nothing to write home about but draw an easy matchup in Cleveland's league-worst scoring offense. Laying a field goal with Green Bay is an easy decision this Sunday.

The pick: Packers -3

Quick picks

Winners in BOLD
Bears at Bengals (-6)
Vikings (-3) at Panthers
Raiders at Chiefs (-4)
Cowboys (-4.5) at Giants
Colts at Bills [OFF]
Lions at Bucs [OFF]
Titans (-3) at Cardinals
Jets (-1) at Broncos
Redskins at Chargers (-6)
Eagles at Rams (-2.5)

San Francisco 49ers at Houston Texans (-3)
The Jimmy Garroppolo era got off to a promising start in Chicago (a tough place to play this year despite the Bears' 3-9 record) last week as the 49ers picked up their second win of the season. It was a total team effort for San Francisco, as Carlos Hyde and company rushed for over 100 yards while their defense held Chicago to just 147 yards of offense. A similar result appears to be in the cards in Houston this Sunday.

The Texans have failed to register more than 16 points in four of their last five games and have amassed a ghastly minus-7 turnover differential in that span. Houston's defense has allowed teams to run roughshod over them of late, surrendering over 300 rushing yards in their last two games.

Expect the 49ers to control this game from start to finish and prevail as underdogs.
The pick: 49ers +3

Seattle Seahawks at Jacksonville Jaguars (-3)
The Seahawks face a daunting task traveling to Jacksonville after pulling off an upset in a physical game with the Eagles at home last week.

The Jaguars' tenacious pass rush (the NFL's best with 45 sacks) should give Russell Wilson fits when he drops back to pass. Jacksonville also boasts the No. 1 defense by passing yards, yards per play and points allowed, which presents a matchup nightmare for Seattle.

By contrast, Jacksonville's offense should have their way with the Seahawks' depleted defense. Leonard Fournette and the Jaguar rushing attack are tops in the league and have greatly contributed toward Jacksonville's being third in the league in time of possession. Look for the Jaguars to make a statement and run their record to 9-4.
The pick: Jaguars -3

CITATION ON PETITION FOR ALLOWANCE OF ACCOUNT

Docket No. SU413197

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT

In the matter of: Lucy C Wentworth

Suffolk Probate and Family Court
24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114
(617) 788-8300

To all interested persons: A Petition has been filed by: Bank of America of Providence, RI requesting allowance of the Eleventh to the Thirteenth account(s) as Trustee and any other relief as requested in the Petition.

You have the right to obtain a copy of the Petition from the Petitioner or at the Court. You have a right to object to this proceeding. To do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance and objection at this Court before: 10:00 a.m. 01/02/2018.

This is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline by which you must file a written appearance and objection if you object to this proceeding. If you fail to file a timely written appearance and objection followed by an Affidavit of Objections within thirty (30) days of the return date, action may be taken without further notice to you.

WITNESS, Hon. Brian J. Dunn, First Justice of this Court.

Date: November 24, 2017

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
(SEAL) LAND COURT 17 SM 008628
DEPARTMENT OF THE TRIAL COURT

ORDER OF NOTICE

TO: Maureen K. Peacock, and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act:, 50 U.S.C.c. 50 §3901 (et seq):

Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), claiming to have an interest in a Mortgage covering real property in Boston (South Boston), numbered 161 West 8th Street, given by Maureen K. Peacock and Thomas E. Peacock to Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc., as nominee for Principal Residential Mortgage, Inc., its successors and assigns, dated October 15, 2004, Registered with Suffolk County Registry District of the Land Court as Document Number 691332, and noted on Certificate of Title Number 121417, and now held by plaintiff by assignment has/have filed with this court a complaint for determination of Defendant's/Defendants' Servicemembers status.

If you now are, or recently have been, in the active military service of the United States of America, then you may be entitled to the benefits of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act. If you object to a foreclosure of the above-mentioned property on that basis, then you or your attorney must file a written appearance and answer in this court at Three Pemberton Square, Boston, MA 02108 on or before January 1, 2018 or you will be forever barred from claiming that you are entitled to the benefits of said Act.

Witness, JUDITH C. CUTLER Chief Justice of this Court on November 17, 2017

Aries Trust in yourself and your ideas if you want to move forward with your long-term plans. Your knowledge and intelligence will help you win any debate you face.

Taurus An emotional situation based on half-truths will leave you in a quandary. Look for unusual ways to compensate someone being left out or hurt by what's transpired.

Gemini A business or personal relationship will take an upward turn. Discuss your thoughts and you will be able to iron out any difference and set your plans in motion.

Cancer A business trip or educational pursuit will help you decide what direction you should pursue. Follow your dreams and let your heart be your guide.

Leo Attend networking functions or work-related festivities that will give you a chance to show off what you have to offer. Your intelligence and confidence will not go unnoticed.

Virgo An investment, bonus or gift will come from an unexpected source. Visitors or changes to your living arrangements will make life complicated.

Libra Pay more attention to the way you look and feel. An update or makeover will lift your spirits and help you prepare for the upcoming festivities. Romance is highlighted.

Scorpio Offer peace and love instead of over-reacting to someone's story that may or may not be true. Be patient, listen and observe in order to avoid a mishap.

Sagittarius A personal investment will pay off. Celebrate your good fortune with someone you love. An emotional promise will lead to benefits and a positive change in lifestyle.

Capricorn Showing empathy and offering suggestions should be the extent of the help you offer a person or cause if you want to avoid being taken advantage.

Aquarius Keep your life simple and your emotions controlled. Don't be tempted to get involved in someone else's plans, especially if it will cost you.

Pisces Don't take chances when it comes to how you earn your keep. Be straight about what you can offer, and work hard to build a good rapport with your affiliates. EUGENIA LAST

Certified Audit CAC of Circulations

We asked the nurses at Tufts:

Q. Would you encourage a job-seeking nurse to take a position at Tufts Medical Center?

A. 70 percent of the RNs currently working at Tufts said "no." ***

- At Tufts, there are not enough nurses on staff to provide the safe, quality care that patients deserve.
- At Tufts, nurses are not compensated competitively.
- And at Tufts, management refuses to do what's necessary to resolve these two issues.

Tufts management: Settle a fair contract so that your patients get the care they need and deserve, and so that you can attract and retain the area's top nursing talent.

From a Sept. 2017 survey of Tufts' RNs*
